The Yucatan is known for its ancient ruins, from Mayan temples to crumbling buildings constructed at the end of the 18th century during the boom of henequen, or sisal, a fibrous plant used for textiles. At Chablé, visitors can soak up some of that history in the hotel's main area, set in a restored turn-of-the-century hacienda on a 750-acre property. The 40 guest rooms are slightly more contemporary—they're glass-fronted stand-alone casitas with hammock-filled terraces that spill onto the surrounding Yucatecan jungle. Here, nature is front and center—even the spa is set next to a cenote, a natural limestone sinkhole.
